Questions 19 to 26

Read the text carefully and answer the questions. Choose the answer A, B, C or D. For each question, mark the correct answer A, B, C or D on your answer sheet.

Tammy had everything Sarah wanted: a pool in her backyard, popularity, and new clothes. Worse, it seemed (at least to Sarah) that Tammy had the Midas touch. Everything she touched turned to gold. She won the class lucky draw and with it RM50! She guessed how many jelly beans were in the jar in the yearly guess-how-many contest and won all 768 of them. She won every public speaking she entered, every art competition and every award the school offered. She had all the luck in the world.

Sarah was an only child. She wore hand-me-downs from her older cousin Alice. She did not have many friends. Her best friend Kana was really the best in many ways: kind, generous and loyal, and this made Sarah really grateful. Just the kind of person you would want for a best friend. However, Sarah most certainly did not have good luck. She never won anything. On the days, she carried an umbrella, it never rained; on the days, she forgot her umbrella, dark rain clouds seemed to follow her around.

One rainy day in June, though, Sarah and Tammy swapped luck. That was how Sarah thought of it, anyway. It was not expected, and it certainly was not planned. Sarah woke up and things felt different. It was a weird feeling that she had never experienced before. She felt lucky.

She rolled out of bed and noticed a small package on her desk. She opened it: it was a brand new dress, the same one she had been eyeing for weeks. "Mom!" she called. "Did you get me this dress?"

"It's from your grandmother," her mother called back. "Early birthday gift!"

Sarah shrugged. Her birthday was not until August.

"And I made your favourite! Chocolate chip pancakes!" her mother shouted.

"Pancakes on a Wednesday?" This truly was a different kind of day.

And it didn't stop there. On the school bus, Aziz, the most popular boy in school, saved her a seat. Then Puan Rose picked her — yes, her! — to take care of the class hamster over the weekend. The cafeteria lady gave her two extra cookies and said with a wink, "Your lucky day!"

But the best part of the day was art class. Mr. Lee, her art teacher, walked around the room slowly. Sarah had not spent much time on her project. But it was still pretty, still unique. Mr. Lee walked past Tammy's art project and did not even pause. Tammy looked devastated. Her hair was still wet from that morning's rain. She had forgotten to bring an umbrella.

"Well, class!" Mr. Lee said. "I think our winner for this month is Sarah! Excellent work, Sarah — this shows a lot of progress!"

Sarah smiled proudly. "Guess you have some competition," she whispered to Tammy.

Sarah was on top of the world. She did not feel like an ordinary sixteen year old at all. Today, she felt like a better-than-average teenager, possibly the best sixteen-year-old pupil who had ever existed. She wondered what was next.

Tammy, she noticed, had spent most of the day sulking. "Let someone else have a shot at being lucky for once". Sarah whispered to Kana with a wicked smile and Tammy saw it. Then she noticed that Tammy was crying. Small tears dripped down onto her uniform.

"What's wrong?" Sarah asked.

"I just spent a lot of time on that project," Tammy said between hiccupped sobs.

Sarah was beginning to feel awful. After all, she had not spent much time on her project at all.

Then she felt Kana tap her on the shoulder. "You know, Sarah," Kana started. She looked angry and hurt at the same time. "You haven't been very nice today. You've been acting like...like you're the best person in the world." She shook her head. "This just isn't like you at all."

Now Sarah felt even worse. It was one thing to have the class pet dislike you, but another thing entirely to disappoint your best friend. "I'm sorry, Kana," she said. "It's just been a weird day."

She walked over to Tammy and gave her a hug. "Don't worry," she whispered, "Your luck will change soon enough." Luck, Sarah was beginning to think, was overrated.

19 From paragraph 1, what did Tammy have at the beginning of the story?

- A All the beauty in the world.
- B All the gold in the world.
- C All the talent in the world.
- D All the luck in the world.

20 From paragraph 2, what was Sarah's characteristic?

- A Kind
- B Loyal
- C Grateful
- D Generous

- 21 From paragraph 3, what miracle happened to Sarah?
- A Her plans worked. B Her luck improved.
C Her wishes were answered. D Her expectation was fulfilled.
- 22 From paragraph 10, why was Tammy devastated?
- A Her hair was wet from the rain.
B Sarah did not work hard on her project.
C Sarah's art was always better than hers.
D Mr. Lee did not stop to look at her painting.
- 23 "Let someone else have a shot at being lucky for once".
Based on the phrase above, what can you conclude about Sarah's relationship with Tammy?
- A Sarah felt competitive with Tammy and wanted to be like her.
B Sarah thought Tammy was very talented and deserved to be lucky.
C Sarah wished Tammy would notice her, because Tammy was so popular.
D Sarah liked Tammy's personality and thought Tammy was a nice person.
- 24 Why was Tammy upset when the art teacher did not praise her artwork?
- A She thought her art was better than Sarah's.
B She thought her art showed a lot of progress.
C She had put less effort into it.
D She had lost her luck.
- 25 When did Sarah realise that she had done something really bad?
- A When Tammy was crying.
B When her art was chosen as the best.
C When she felt she was special than everyone else.
D When her best friend told her that she was acting weird.
- 26 What is the best lesson that you can learn from this passage?
- A You must be rich to be lucky. B You should be nice to everyone.
C You must be popular to be kind. D You should rely on luck to succeed.

Questions 27 to 32

You are going to read an extract below.

For each question, mark the correct answer (A to H) on your answer sheet.

USE YOUR REFRIGERATOR CORRECTLY

The food we keep in our refrigerator contains millions of harmful bacteria. If allowed to get out of hand, they can cause food poisoning. Taking care of your refrigerator reduces the risk of food contamination.

The first step is to store food in small amounts. 27 ☐. A compartment of the refrigerator called the Crisper, usually comes with drawers, is the warmest section of the refrigerator. It should only be used to keep fruit and vegetables. Bottle compartments, usually at the door of the refrigerator, should only be used for water and other liquids. 28 ☐. Remember to keep your cooked food in airtight containers.

Raw meat, fish and poultry belong in the freezer compartment. Once again, proper handling and storage will prevent bacteria from growing. 29 ☐. If it does spill, the liquid should be wiped immediately.

Never mix cooked food with raw food. 30 ☐. Easily spoilt foodstuff should be eaten as soon as possible. This helps to prevent the spread of bacteria.

Clean the refrigerator as often as possible. 31 ☐. Therefore, make sure to properly clean the trays, compartments and the interior of the refrigerator.

Defrosting frozen food should be done inside the refrigerator and not outside. 32 ☐. Bacteria such as salmonella and E-Coli which can be found in meat, poultry and fish are tough to kill.

- A Beef, prawn and chicken are usually kept in the cooler compartment.
- B This reduces the risk of contamination as heat causes foodstuff to rot even faster.
- C Defrosting frozen food can cause foodstuff to change in taste.
- D Arrange food properly, sorting it into separate containers.
- E Raw meat should be wrapped and kept on a plate or in a container to prevent any liquid from dripping.
- F Cooked food, butter and cheese is usually kept in the cooler compartment.
- G This can lead to cross-contamination whereby bacteria move from one type of food to another.
- H A dirty refrigerator works less efficiently and a little warmth is all it takes for harmful bacteria to grow.
