Question 22

Read the story below and answer the questions that follow.
 Baca cerita di bawah dan jawab soalan-soalan berikutnya.

Once upon a time, there was a woman who loved to sew. She made beautiful dresses for her daughters and handsome suits for her sons. They were made of the richest, brightest fabrics she could afford. Long after the children had gone to bed, she would sit by the light of a single candle and sew into the night. In the morning, she would be up earlier than anyone else, ready to go out to work for her family.

But the years passed. One by one, her daughters got married and left home. Of course their mother sewed every stitch of their wedding gowns. Her sons went off to seek their fortunes. They settled in faraway lands. From time to time, they sent letters home to their mother, but in all her busy life, she had never learned to read. She kept the letters in a chest, tied up with ribbons, until a friend from the nearby town could come to read for her. As the woman grew older, she could no longer work, but she still loved to sew. At last, she became too weak to look after herself. Her friend invited her to stay. All she took with her was the chest. Too frail to walk, the old woman lay in bed each day, watching the sun goes by.....

WITHOUT A PLACE TO CALL HOME

The animals heard,
That thunderous sound again,
Of the bulldozers,
Coming closer,
Turning the thick jungle,
Into thin shrubs,
And they know,
They have to move again,
And look for new shelters.

The snakes slither away,
The elephants thump their feet,
The lions roar powerlessly,
The parrots squeak helplessly,
Even the snails sigh weakly,
It's not fair,
They are tired, hungry and thirsty,
And without a place to call their homes.
